WILLIAM BELL JR.

William Bell was born Mar. 12, 1816 at Barnard Castle, County of Durham and parish of Barnard Castle, England the son of William Bell of the same place and Jane Heslop of Westwich parish, County of Durham, England. Met and married Jane Heslop Dec. 8, 1834, different people. William died Mar. 22, 1886.

The family held high standards and worked hard to keep them. The family did not believe in idleness but were industrious and made the most of their time.

William Bell Sr. was a carpenter by trade and worked early and late cutting and fitting lumber.

As a child William Jr. helped his parents. He didn't get very much schooling. As soon as he could handle a hammer and saw he was taken out of school to help his father and continued working with him until he was 17 years old. In 1833 he went to London and followed the trade of cabinet making. He joined a Socialist group but didn't find satisfaction with this group. Work slackened so he and his wife Jane went back to his home town to work for a cabinet maker.

At this time two Mormon elders called at their home and were invited to eat with William and Jane, then the elders explained their gospel to them. They attended a London Conference and were convinced of the truthfulness of the gospel and they were baptized. His family disowned him.

William and Jane were living in London in July 1845 where they heard some of the saints were going to America in the spring. They made plans to go with the saints. William had been ordained to the offices of priest and elder. He was very active in the church.
